Daily Market Report

- Gold rises to a weekly high after the US and Iran confirmed a deal to end the war, easing inflation fears.
- Silver soars to near $70.80 as the US-Iran peace deal boosts risk appetite and weighs on the dollar.
- The USD Index drops as fading safe-haven demand follows the de-escalation in the Middle East.
- Oil falls to a two-month low near $79.50 as the US-Iran agreement removes the regional supply-risk premium.
- Trump claimed the Strait of Hormuz will be "permanently toll free" under the new Iran agreement.
- The UK, France, Germany, and Italy are ready to lift Iran sanctions following the US-Iran agreement.
- Singapore is setting up a gold-clearing system in a push to become a major gold trading hub.
- Gold cleared $4,200 as optimism over a Middle East deal eased inflation concerns ahead of the final agreement.
- Gold's rally reflects a broad shift in market sentiment, with geopolitical risk premiums unwinding rapidly across commodities.
- Despite the peace deal lifting gold short-term, lingering Fed rate-hike expectations could still cap further upside in the coming sessions.
- With the Israel-Iran conflict now resolved, traders are likely to shift focus back to upcoming US economic data and Fed policy signals for gold's next direction.
