Daily Market Report

- Gold drifts lower from its seven-week peak, holding above the $4,300 pivotal support as US inflation data looms large this week.
- Weak US jobs data dented rate hike bets, with US Treasury yields dropping and gold holding firm after the soft NFP print.
- Silver holds gains after the weak jobs report, starting the CPI week on a flat note around $63.50.
- Hormuz tensions escalate again as an unconfirmed missile attack emerges amid fragile US-Iran talks, keeping markets on edge.
- WTI rises to near $79.50 as uncertainty over the Strait of Hormuz reopening keeps oil supply risks elevated.
- The USD advances above 99.50 as Middle East risks revive safe-haven demand, capping gold's upside.
- The Euro consolidates below its highest level since June 17 as Mideast tensions continue to support the dollar.
- Gold is seen readying for a break higher technically, though the move hinges on this week's US CPI data outcome.
- Hormuz hopes eased Fed risk perceptions last week, but the fresh unconfirmed missile attack threatens to reverse that narrative.
- US CPI data this week is the defining event, a soft print could cement rate cut hopes and push gold above key resistance levels.
