Daily Market Report

- Gold rallies beyond $4,400, its highest since early June, driven by decisive buying pressure and a shift in Fed expectations amid central bank buying.
- Iran declared it won't negotiate with the US until Trump's term is done, effectively collapsing peace talks and reigniting geopolitical risk.
- WTI jumps over 6% as the Strait of Hormuz reopening remains uncertain, with peace talks now stalled after Iran's shock announcement.
- Silver holds near $66.00 under pressure from Fed hike fears and the oil surge, despite earlier eyeing a move toward $69.
- US Treasury yields climb as the oil spike revives CPI jitters ahead of today's crucial US inflation data release.
- Fed's Hammack called for rate hikes, saying current policy is not restrictive enough to bring inflation under control.
- The USD consolidates below 100.00 as bulls await US CPI, with Iran risks keeping haven demand alive but capped.
- Trump said Iran should pay for regional damage, hardening the US stance and reducing the likelihood of a near-term diplomatic resolution.
- The Euro flat lines near mid-1.1500s as traders adopt a wait-and-see approach ahead of US CPI amid Iran uncertainty.
