Daily Market Report

- Gold pulls back from its three-month high, failing ahead of $4,700 as Fed rate hike fears and escalating Middle East tensions revive USD support.
- Gold's bullish momentum still has room to run, with analysts seeing potential to reach $5,000 if PCE softens and Warsh strikes a dovish tone at Jackson Hole.
- Silver corrects below $68 ahead of today's US PCE inflation data, which could set the tone for Fed policy expectations heading into September.
- Iran's Economy Minister warned that "enemies should wait for an attack," sharply raising the risk of fresh military escalation.
- WTI holds ground above $84.50 as escalating US sanctions concerns on Iran keep the supply risk premium firmly in place.
- The USD holds gains near 99.00 as escalating geopolitical risks restore safe-haven demand, capping gold's recent rally.
- The Euro gains support from hawkish ECB expectations but is capped at 1.1700 as the RSI signals overbought conditions.
- July PCE inflation data is due today, with the previous reading at 3.7% — still well above the Fed's 2% target making it the critical event of the week.
- Warsh's Jackson Hole speech on Friday will be his first major public address as Fed Chair, making it a defining moment for gold, silver, and the dollar.
- With Iran threatening an attack, PCE due today, and Jackson Hole on Friday, gold faces its most event-heavy session in months.
